Department of Developmental Services
1600 Ninth St. Room 340, MS 3-12
Sacramento, CA 95814

Dear Nancy Bargmann,

In compliance with the Welfare and Institution Code 4519.5, the San Andreas Regional Center has completed the statutory requirements of posting the data and hosting the community forums to address the purchase of service requirements. The enclosed document explains in more detail what was discussed and feedback that we received from the community.

San Andreas Regional Center (SARC) remains committed to providing opportunities and information to all consumers, regardless of their language or race. SARC continues to provide outreach to many communities and at many events to allow the maximum information to be presented to as many people as possible. SARC is also utilizing the Cultural Specialist position to better work with communities to customize outreach and information.

We are available if you need further information regarding any of our programs.

Sincerely,

RESULTS OF THE PUBLIC FORUMS ON REGIONAL CENTER PURCHASE OF SERVICE DISPARITIES:
FISCAL YEAR 2019-2020

Outreach
San Andreas Regional Center published its disparity data on its website before the end of calendar year 2020. A link to the data was provided through its website, social media presence (e.g. Facebook), and community listserv. Community stakeholders and partners, such as parent-assistance organizations, Disability Rights California, and the State Council on Developmental Disabilities were also informed and encouraged to spread the word. To inform the community of the public forums, a flyer (which included text in English, Spanish, and Vietnamese) was digitally posted on our website, social media sites and forwarded to consumers, families and stakeholders.

Public Forum
Due to the current state of emergency, our regional center held the public forum regarding its analysis of the Purchase of Service Disparity data for Fiscal Year 2019-2020 remotely, via Zoom. This forum was held on April 15, 2021 from 5:00PM to 6:30PM in the evening.
Participants were able to register in advance and a list of attendees was generated by remote platform application.

Regional center staff members fluent Spanish and Vietnamese provided simultaneous translation during the presentation and break-out sessions. Visual analysis was projected via PowerPoint (attached) by using the “share screen” function on the Zoom remote platform.

Attendance at the virtual public forum had a total of 62 attendees which included service providers, representatives of public agencies and community based organizations, consumers and families of consumers.

Engagement
During the public forum, attendees were welcomed to the virtual meeting and instructions were provided to access translation and break-out room functions. The SARC cultural specialist presented a power point presentation with details about POS data for fiscal year 2019-2020. A PDF file was attached in the chat section for attendees to have copies of power point presentation slides. After the presentation about POS data, attendees were encouraged to provide feedback regarding matters related to service access and POS utilization by joining a break out room.

Three break out rooms were created according to language. There were break out rooms conducted in English, Spanish and Vietnamese. Facilitators for the break out rooms provided space for attendees to provide open ended comments or ask questions. To help generate dialogue, the following questions were prepared in advance: Do you receive services in your preferred language?; Are the services that you receive responsive to your cultural needs?; Please identify the three biggest barriers to obtaining services?; Is there an authorized service that you are not receiving due to language need?; Do you feel comfortable in approaching your service coordinator?; and Are you given reports and materials in your preferred language?

During this year’s public forum, feedback and comments from the community were related to language and services access.

Matters related to Language:

- IPPs are not always written in Spanish but the community recognized that a request can be made to translate the IPP.
- There are certain forms that are not translated into the family’s native language. Sometimes families can’t read the documents or applications they have received.
- Transition fairs often only have English representatives, and non-English speakers are required to take a translator with them in order to obtain information. Consumers or families whom speak a language other than English might feel left out. Zoom has helped bridge that gap by enabling a Spanish speaking resource fair; however, it has been difficult for resource fair organizers to recruit vendors to fair targeting specific language populations.
- The regional center has service coordinators that can speak the language of the consumer/family, but various service provider agencies do not have the staffing capacity to translate for parents. This lack of language capacity at the service provider level, results in confusion for the consumer/family.
- The migrant families whom speak native Mexican languages are a group in the rural areas of the community and they have much difficulty accessing services in their native language.
- Many websites do not have translation for all the website’s content, thus becoming a barrier.

Matters Related to Service Access:

- Families may not know whom they should invite to different meetings because they don’t know the procedures. For instance, in IEP transition meetings, this has been reported to be an issue. Some families may not know that the regional center will need to be invited to an IEP in order for a service coordinator attend. Some parents might assume that the services coordinator will accept an invitation from the school district alone.
- Almost 30% of autism cases aren’t getting services. The questions were posed: “Maybe people didn’t want services during the pandemic, or services were covered by insurance?”
• Parents don’t know what regional center services to ask for, so a good initial orientation for new families or families in transition can help inform which services they may be able to access.

• Respite is one of the main services used by families and they often get confused about it. Some families report that it feels like the process for setting up respite takes too much time. The process, which parents view as tedious, may be a deterrent for respite or other services. It was suggested for families to obtain better information and training in how to access specific services such as respite.

• It’s hard for service providers/vendors to recruit workers that speak a consumer or family’s language.

• Families may be in different types of crisis such as difficulty affording adequate housing. Sometimes it would be helpful to look at all of the issues the family is going through and know that, when a family is in crisis, they may be looking at the basics rather than focusing on other services. When a family has a sense of feeling overwhelmed, they may have a difficult time seeking or navigating access to services.

• People give up on accessing a particular service because the waiting lists for services are too long. It was speculated whether this long wait time for accessing services could be why some consumers do not receive certain services.

• For some families, transportation resources are limited and this becomes an obstacle when they want to obtain access to services. Lack of child care can also affect a family’s ability to obtain or take part in a service.

SARC will continue to follow through on its previous commitments to addressing the service access and equity issues in our regional center system and will identify innovative strategies to meet the needs of consumers and their families. Attached to this letter are various supporting documents including: flyer for public form, slides presented during public forum, list of questions presented during forum and a list of past and future action tasks the regional center will incorporate to address issues related to service access and equity.

Should you have any questions or concerns regarding this report, the presentation or the data provided here, please feel free to contact us.

Sincerely,
